Re Item V

5.1 The document GB1497114 is regarded as being the closest prior art to the subject-matter of claim 1, and shows:

A conditioning device for moulded plastic items for use in blow mould plants comprising:

- a chain or other continuous conveying device forming a spiral-type path suitable for conveying at least one plastic item;
- at least a first thermal conditioning stage comprising at least one duct through which said at least one plastic item can be conveyed and that is crossed by a length of said chain or other continuous conveying device and is suitable for thermally conditioning by heating and/or cooling said at least one plastic item; wherein said chain or other continuous conveying device follows a path comprising the sections of feeding said at least one plastic item through said first thermal conditioning stage, of removing said at least one plastic item from said first heating stage for a predetermined amount of time in order to redistribute the temperature inside said at least one plastic item with a predetermined degree of uniformity, and of re-feeding said at least one plastic item into said first thermal conditioning stage.

The subject-matter of claim 1 differs from this known device in that said at least one duct is crossed by at least two sections, of said chain or other continuous conveying device, placed side by side, wherein said sections belong each to a different spiral of said chain or other continuous conveying device.

The subject-matter of claim 1 is therefore new (Article 33(2) PCT).

The problem to be solved by the present invention may be regarded as how to make a more compact plant and how to save energy in a oven or cooling box.

The solution to this problem proposed in claim 1 of the present application is considered as involving an inventive step (Article 33(3) PCT) as no other prior art shows a conditioning duct where a spiral-type path makes the plastic item pass the same duct several times, each time following a separate spiral path. Therefore the skilled man would not have the necessary information to solve the posed problem using the features of the characterizing portion of claim 1.

5.2 Claims 2-11 are dependent on claim 1 and as such also meet the requirements of the PCT with respect to novelty and inventive step.

Re Items VII and VIII

7.1 Claims 1: The definition of the matter for which protection is sought is not clearly indicated (Rule 6.3 PCT). The general statement "A conditioning device for plastic items.." should be replaced by a more clear statement. A suggestion from the examining division is to use the formulation "A conditioning device for injection moulded plastic preforms for use in blow mould plants..". A basis for this can be found in the first paragraph of the description of the present application.

7.2 The vague and imprecise statement in the description on page 12 (lines 18 and 19) implies that the subject-matter for which protection is sought may be different to that defined by the claims, thereby resulting in lack of clarity (Article 6 PCT) when used to interpret them.

7.3 Contrary to the requirements of Rule 5.1(a)(ii) PCT, the relevant background art disclosed in the documents GB1497114, US5326258 and US5308233 is not mentioned in the description, nor are these documents identified therein.

7.4 When filing amended claim(s) the applicant should at the same time have brought the description into conformity with the amended claims.

7.5 The dependent claims 2-11 should have been drafted as "A plant comprising a conditioning device as claimed in claim .." and/or as "A conditioning device as claimed in claim ..".
